Harbor now has no material cash outside of the trust account (the IPO trust account) into which the net proceeds of the IPO were deposited, and Harbor has scheduled a special meeting of its stockholders for April 10, 2008, and has distributed to its stockholders a proxy statement soliciting their approval for the proposed dissolution and liquidation of Harbor. If Harbor's dissolution and liquidation are approved by the stockholders at such special meeting, Harbor plans as soon as practicable thereafter to dissolve and wind up its affairs, including distribution to the holders of shares of Harbor common stock sold in the IPO of the principal and interest (net of tax liabilities) then held in the IPO trust account.
