GTECH S.P.A. ANNOUNCES NAME OF NEW COMPANY AS IGT

Planned corporate structure and executive leadership team announced

Organization will include distinct North America Gaming and North America Lottery units, also responsible for global products and services

ROME, ITALY and PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND (U.S.) February 26, 2015 GTECH S.p.A. today announced that upon completion of its acquisition of International Game Technology (NYSE:IGT), the combined entities will be branded as IGT and that the holding company, Georgia Worldwide PLC, has changed its name to International Game Technology PLC. Upon the completion of the acquisition, IGT will be the global leader in delivering innovative end-to-end gaming solutions across the full spectrum of regulated gaming while continuing to transform the industry with cutting-edge technology and innovative content.

In addition, GTECH has announced the corporate structure and executive team that will lead the combined organization. The new company will leverage the strengths of the two combined gaming industry leaders to become the largest gaming and lottery company in the world.

The combination of GTECH and IGT brings together two highly complementary legacy businesses to form the true blue chip company in global gaming. The new name and branding reflect this positioning. In addition, our two companies have similar core values; in fact, our respective names are derived from the same origin. The comprehensive footprint of our new group fully validates the global claim inscribed in the IGT name, said Marco Sala, GTECH S.p.A. Chief Executive Officer. Our new logo, marrying the IGT name and the iconic GTECH globe, draws upon the substantial brand equity of our two companies. It symbolizes our unique capacity to transform the industry with cutting-edge technology and innovative content; to deliver exciting game experiences through every channel, including gaming, lottery, interactive, mobile, and social; and to be the partner of choice in the global gaming industry.

Corporate Structure

Building on GTECH's success with its current organizational structure, the new company will be shaped as a customer-facing organization with four business units operating in three regions: North America, International and Italy.

With the specific intent to offer customers a single point of contact, the North America region will be comprised of two business units focused along different customers. Each will be separately responsible for driving the growth of the entire product portfolio for WLA customers (North America Lottery) and for Commercial customers (North America Gaming).

North America Gaming will also have global responsibility for the product development, manufacturing, marketing and delivery of all of the company's gaming offerings. This includes interactive and sports betting, as well as oversight of the DoubleDown Casino online social gaming business. The respective legacy IGT groups across gaming and interactive will be integrated into North America Gaming as appropriate.

North America Lottery will have global responsibility for the product development, marketing, and delivery of all the company's lottery offerings.

Consistent with the current GTECH structure, the International business unit will be responsible for the strategic development and management of all business conducted outside of North America and Italy, across the company's entire product portfolio. The International organization will have specialized and separate sales and operations groups, each supported by the respective North America product and services organizations. The respective legacy International IGT groups will be integrated into the International business unit as appropriate.

The Italy business unit will operate as it does today. All product development, marketing, manufacturing, and servicing will be supported by North America Lottery and North America Gaming as appropriate.

The corporate functions related to Finance, Legal and Human Resources will be managed on a global basis.
