RYANAIR CUTS WINTER FLIGHTS & JOBS AS IRISH GOVT'S €10 TAX DEVASTATES TOURISM

Ryanair, Ireland's largest airline, today (17th June 09) announced cuts in its winter based aircraft, flights and jobs at Dublin and Shannon Airports as the Government's €10 tourist tax continues to devastate Irish traffic and tourism.

In the first five months of 2009 traffic at Dublin Airport has fallen by 11%, a loss of 1 million passengers in just five months. If this traffic collapse continues for the full year it will mean the loss of 2.5 million passengers, 2,500 jobs at Dublin Airport and €750 million of tourism spend in the Irish economy in 2009.

Ryanair today announced that it will cut its base aircraft by one at both Dublin (from 17 to 16) and Shannon (from 4 to 3) this winter, resulting in the loss of 350,000 passengers and 350 jobs at Dublin Airport and a further 300,000 passengers and 300 jobs in Shannon Airport.

Further cuts in winter flight and traffic numbers will be announced in the coming months if the Government fails to scrap this €10 tourist tax. Ryanair will switch these aircraft and continue to grow in lower cost/no tourist tax countries such as Belgium, Holland, Greece and Spain where governments have recently scrapped tourist taxes and airport charges to promote tourism.

Ryanair confirmed that these winter cutbacks can be reversed if the Government scraps its €10 tourist tax.

Ryanair announced reductions as follows for the winter 2009 schedule:

- A 25% cut in Shannon based aircraft (4 to 3).
- A 6% cut in Dublin based aircraft (17 to 16).
- A cut of 36 flights per week at Shannon.
- A cut of 44 flights per week at Dublin.
- The loss of 650 airport and tourism jobs.
- The loss of €750 million in tourism spend.

Ryanair's Michael O'Leary said:

Edgar Filing: RYANAIR HOLDINGS PLC - Form 6-K

"The Irish Government's €10 tourist tax is "tourism suicide" which is devastating visitor numbers and jobs. Price sensitive visitors are switching to lower cost destinations in Europe where governments welcome tourists, not tax them.

"Ryanair will remove one aircraft from both Dublin and Shannon this winter and further cuts can be expected in the coming months if the €10 tourist tax is not scrapped. If the tourist tax is scrapped these cuts, and the tourism collapse, will be reversed.

This tourist tax will raise just €125 million per annum and for this tiny tax revenue the Irish government will lose over 2,500 jobs and more than €750 million in tourism spend, the VAT receipts on which would exceed €150 million".

Ends.
