Frequently Asked Questions

The purpose of these pages is to try to anticipate the questions you might have and to answer them in order to help you have a full understanding of the transaction we are announcing today. As you have additional questions, we urge you to take them to your supervisor or GDL and they will get answers for you. Many of these will be related to your particular area, but as we answer questions that seem to have a more general application, we will continue to update and post this list. The date at the top will be the indication of a latest version.

The transaction

Why now?

There are really several answers to that, all of which are important:

As both Sally and Consumer Products have grown, the environment in which our competitors and trade partners have viewed this growth has changed. Several of Sally's biggest vendors (L'Oréal, Wella, Clairol) are Consumer Products' biggest competitors. And several of Consumer Products' most important trade partners (Wal-Mart, Target, Walgreen's) are competing with Sally. When our products were not on the radar screen, this was not a big issue, but as our shares have grown, several of the companies we compete against have begun to use this as a wedge issue against us. As Sally has grown, and as it has ventured for the first time into television advertising, its percentage of retail, off-the-street customers has increased and, rightly or wrongly, our trade partners feel those customers are being drawn from their base and this has strained our relationships.

An opportunity was presented to the company to create a very strong professional beauty products and services force by combining Sally, BSG and the existing Regis operations. After careful analysis and negotiation, the boards of both companies determined that there were growth opportunities from this combination which will be a new, independent company which neither company could achieve as independent entities.

As importantly, our consumer products company has grown to a point in both sales and profits where it could stand on its own as an independent company. Because of our margin growth and sales growth, we have not had to lean on Sally earnings for a number of years, so operating independently today means Business As Usual from the way we have been operating.

Timing

When does all of this take effect?

The boards of both companies have approved these moves and now shareholders of both companies will vote on their approval. Therefore, this will not be completed until sometime later in the year and there are a number of additional approvals and steps that need to be achieved before the transaction can close.

But for us it is business as usual through this whole process, with an even greater focus on consumer products. We will continue to build our brands, to produce a blockbuster Nexxus launch, to introduce new products, to produce winning advertising and promotions, to work with the same trade partners and to find ways to make our business more efficient so we can free dollars to put behind business building activities. Everyone's goal remains the same: to build sales and profits.

To the extent that there are any changes in roles and responsibilities, we will evolve into that as we would have continued to evolve the consumer products organization if this change had never happened. There will be some changes. Some of our executives will be involved in public reporting responsibilities as a standalone public company that were not specifically the responsibility of ACCPWW, so we will have to manage that. But those kinds of changes will have no impact on the job responsibilities of most of you.

Structure Our New Company

What will the name of our new company be?

No change. The Alberto-Culver Company. Also, our stock exchange symbol will continue to be ACV.

What will the management structure be?

Carol Bernick will continue in her role as executive Chairman. Jim Marino will continue as the President and will add the title of CEO. The senior managers of the business will continue to meet as a Global Management Team.

Will my job change?

For the vast majority of you the answer is No Change. As we figure out our business as a standalone entity, there will be some changes, but they will not impact many people.

Our international markets will continue to develop our global brands and to build strong regional brand portfolios.

Pro-Line will continue to develop ways to increase share in their markets.

CLA will continue to serve its current customers and to build new markets that will continue its growth.

Cederroth will continue to be a leading player in the Nordic markets.

Will there be any changes in titles, grades, etc?

Again very few, if any, changes. The important thing to realize is that this is the same company it was before the announcement. We no longer have our affiliation with Sally Beauty, but very few consumer products jobs had any ongoing contact with Sally.

What will the Regis management structure be?

Howard Bernick will be joining the new company as non-executive Chairman. Paul Finkelstein, who is currently Chairman and CEO of Regis will continue in the CEO role. There will be a board of directors, four of whom will be chosen by Alberto-Culver, four by Regis and two who will be independent. Gary Winterhalter, President of Sally, will report to Mr. Finkelstein. Mike Renzulli will be an advisor to the new company.

Pay & benefits

Will the January 1 pay increases still be in effect?

No change.

Will our benefits change?

No change. And as before it will be an important part of the Human Resource role to continue to look for ways to ensure that our benefits stay competitive with peer companies.

Will 401-k or profit sharing programs change?

No change, and this includes the increased match for the 401-k plan remaining in place. There will be a Regis stock fund added to the plans. If you currently hold ACV shares in the plans, you will receive a proportionate share of Regis stock to make you whole for the value of your shares.

The way we work

Will marketing plans or financial plans change?

Business as usual.

Do you see any changes with vendors or outside suppliers?

No change as a result of this transaction. We are always in the process of adding to and evaluating our outside resources.

Will we continue to look for acquisitions to grow the business?

Absolutely. Acquisitions will be critically important to our future growth.

Will the GDL process continue?

Business as usual. There may be more frequent meetings and communications via the GDLs for a time as we see this as a valuable tool to be sure any questions or concerns you have during this transition are answered.

Are there any changes contemplated in the company's mission or values?

None.
