Hello! Today is yet another incredibly exciting and momentous day for Mallinckrodt Pharmaceuticals in what is still only our first year as a publicly traded company. This morning, just about three weeks after closing the Cadence transaction, we announced that Mallinckrodt has entered into a definitive merger agreement whereby we will acquire Questcor Pharmaceuticals. And with this transaction, we'll expect that we'll significantly increase our scale, revenue, cash flow and profitability while at the same time enhancing and expanding the depth of our growing portfolio of Specialty Brands.

This deal is consistent with the strategic BD&L objectives that we've talked about previously to drive growth through opportunities that fit well with our core strengths, drive profit, and support our pipeline or are immediately accretive. It's also clearly aligned with our strategy to advance the portfolio with focused R&D investments that leverage our core capability. Combining with Questcor clearly fits all these criteria - building the value and financial strength of Mallinckrodt.

We're excited by the opportunities that arise from combining two fast-growing, specialty pharmaceutical companies, and believe that together we will create both a significant and sustainable platform for future revenue and earnings growth, and provide exceptional value for shareholders of both companies. Importantly, the acquisition will add a significant new branded product to our Specialty Pharmaceuticals segment.

H.P. Acthar[®] Gel is an injectable therapy used in the treatment of a number of serious, difficult-to-treat autoimmune and inflammatory disorders, like MS and rheumatoid arthritis, where patients have often been on various treatments for years and exhausted other good therapeutic options. Acthar has demonstrated impressive revenue growth in the past few years, and we expect future growth will be driven by increased prescribing for current on-label indications, and possibly future new indications as well.

Following on the heels of the Cadence acquisition and the FDA approval of XARTEMIS XR, our transaction with Questcor will really solidify our business shift towards Specialty Pharmaceuticals, adding Acthar to our growing roster of brands like OFIRMEV[®], EXALGO[®], XARTEMIS XR and, longer term, MNK-155, in addition to our portfolio of core controlled substance specialty generics.

In fact, on completion of this transaction, approximately 70% of the fiscal year 2014 pro forma revenues of Mallinckrodt will come from branded and specialty generic pharmaceutical products consistent with our objective to become a top quartile specialty pharmaceutical company.

The combined company will continue to be called Mallinckrodt Pharmaceuticals and once the transaction is complete, Questcor commercial operations will come in and function as a separate business unit within our Specialty Pharmaceuticals segment, reporting directly to me. We expect to add Questcor executives to Mallinckrodt's executive leadership team and we will also expand our Board of Directors to twelve members, adding three directors from Questcor, including their CEO.

In the coming days, we will be establishing a joint integration team to begin to plan the post-closing integration details, and some of you will be asked to be part of that next stage. We expect this transaction to close sometime during the third calendar quarter this year.

In summary, we believe Questcor is an excellent strategic fit for us. This acquisition positions us to drive even greater value for our shareholders, employees, customers, and, importantly, patients around the world. I thank each of you for all you do for Mallinckrodt, and know I can count on your support and ongoing commitment as we continue our exciting transformation.
